Metals and metal-containing materials pose a significant risk of catastrophic equipment damage, safety hazards, and operational downtime. Customer is solely responsible for ensuring that all feedstock materials are free of metal contaminants prior to delivery to Company. Customer shall implement appropriate screening, sorting, and verification procedures to prevent metal contamination. If Customer identifies potential metal contamination or uncertainties regarding feedstock composition, Customer shall promptly notify Company and cooperate with Company to implement corrective measures. In the event metal contamination is present in the feedstock and causes damage to Company equipment, Customer shall be responsible for all costs associated with the damage, including but not limited to: repair or replacement of damaged equipment, parts and labor, downtime and loss of production, and any additional remediation or decontamination costs required. Company reserves the right to seek full cost recovery for damages arising from metal contamination, including all reasonable and verifiable costs incurred due to the incident, downtime, and any third-party remediation required. Company reserves the right to suspend or terminate this processing agreement immediately if metal contamination is detected in the feedstock. Termination may occur without liability for future performance or penalties.

11. GENERAL TERMS. The following sections of these Terms shall survive termination or expiration of the Agreement: 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, and 8. The relationship between the parties created by the Agreement is that of independent contractors and not partners, joint ventures, agents, or otherwise.
